Tips for adding crunch!

Consider using different breading with fish, poultry or pork entrees to give big crunch to your meal. In addition, baking instead of frying with these breadyings lowers the fat content of your meal and is a healthier cooking option.

Be careful with pre-packaged breaded items, particularly those with seasoned breadcrumbs, which can have significant amounts of preservatives, salt and potassium. Non-seasoned breadcrumbs are a better alternative.

While most breadcrumb packages have a label to help you identify any additives, freshly breaded items from the meat counter at the grocery store may not have this information readily available. If you do select pre-made breaded entrees, request information on the seasonings used. Label reading is key to avoid eating unwanted preservatives.

Breading items at home is an ideal solution to lower dietary potassium and sodium. Brush raw meat items lightly with olive oil or a beaten egg. Next, dip in cornflakes, panko or unseasoned breadcrumbs. Last add garlic, onion powder, pepper or dried herbs for the flavor you wish to create.
